The world's largest book fair in Frankfurt, Germany, is used to see some big book launches, but none came larger than a six-by-nine-foot (two-by-three-metre) Atlas. Its title is "Earth, Platinum edition". The book contains maps of whole continents, as well as sharp images of famous sites collaged together from 1,000 individual pictures. It was launched by the Australian publishing company "Millennium House". The company printed only 31 copies, each priced at $ 100,000. It has already sold two volumes to the museums in the United Arab Emirates. This is the first time, a book of this size has ever been seen. The last largest book even close in size was the Klencke Atlas, produced in 1660 as a gift for Charles II of England. But it was about one foot smaller than this Atlas. It belongs to the British Library and was measured on Feb 2, 2010.
