SECTION A: READING*(5 Marks)*1. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below it:

If you place a rock under a microscope and observe it carefully, you note that it never changes. But, if you put a piece of coral under that same microscope, you'll detect that it is growing and changing. The coral is alive, the rock is dead. The only evidence of life is growth! This is also true in the psychological world, if you are growing, you are alive. If you are not growing, then you might as well be dead.

You can be motivated out of desire to grow rather than a need to repair your deficiencies. If you recognize that you can always grow, improve; become more and greater, that is enough. When you decide to be immobilized or to experience hurtful emotions, you've made a non-growth decision. Growth motivation means using your life energy for greater happiness, rather than having to improve yourself because you have sinned or because you are in some way incomplete
