Whales are large, marine mammals that live in the ocean. They are known for their size, their strong bodies and their ability to swim long distances. There are many types of whales, such as humpback whales, blue whales, and killer whales.

Whales are carnivores and eat a variety of marine animals such as krill, squid and fish. They use their powerful tails, called flukes, to swim through the water and catch their prey. Whales also have excellent hearing and can communicate with each other over long distances with multiple clicks and whistles.

In summer, whales live in cold water near the North or South Poles but in winter they move towards warmer parts of the ocean. They travel either alone or in small groups of three or four.
